Tootbus Study Reveals Cost of living and inflation seem to be impacting European attitudes towards sustainable city breaks

[Paris, 6 July 2023] Tootbus, the first clean energy sightseeing fleet and subsidiary of RATP Dev, continues to lead the way in promoting environmentally friendly travel experiences. Its latest study reveals the perceptions of sustainable city breaks and getaways across Europe.

Tourists: a “greenish” feeling

The study conducted with OpinionWay in France, Belgium and the United Kingdom found that in 2023, European tourists are increasingly interested in exploring unfamiliar cities and off-the-beaten-track destinations. Respondents from all three countries surveyed expressed a preference for visiting little-known and less-visited cities, with culture being the primary factor influencing their choice of destination.

Inflation a brake on sustainable tourism

Respondents perceived sustainable city breaks as a more expensive option, and the majority considered price to be the most important factor when choosing a travel service provider. Most of them expressed stronger interest in reducing their budget rather than their carbon footprint, with a considerable percentage of Europeans unwilling to pay more for sustainable travel options.

The study also highlighted positive trends in Europeans' travel habits with a focus on consuming local and responsible food, purchasing local products, and engaging in responsible activities.

It also revealed that tourism operators have a critical role to play in promoting sustainable tourism suggesting a need for increased awareness, financial incentives, and official regulations to encourage stakeholders to adopt sustainable practices.

“There is still a challenge to put sustainable travel habits on top of travelers’ agenda. It is the responsibility of tourism operators to do this, together with stakeholders and policymakers, in their own interests and those of the planet,” stated Arnaud Masson, SVP of Sightseeing at RATP Dev. “Tootbus has taken the initiative and is taking its responsibilities seriously: we are already investing heavily in our sustainable fleet in all the countries where we operate.”

Tootbus is a signatory of the Glasgow Declaration that is a catalyst for increased urgency about the need to accelerate climate action in tourism and to secure strong actions and commitment to support the global goals to halve emissions over the next decade and reach Net Zero emissions as soon as possible before 2050.
